

Fake news sur Chouchi (Artsakh) : la ville reste aux mains de ses habitants arméniens

don't believe the anti-Armenian and anti-Artsakh (and shamelessly Big Oil/Big Bank/Big Military Industrial Complex) fake news circulating that announces that Turkish-Azeri forces have taken the city of Shushi in Artsakh (Nagorno-Karabakh).

It is 100% untrue.

If we listen to BBC, the NY Times, Al-Jazeera, CNN, NBC, CBS, ABC, the Wall Street Journal, the LA Times, and a horde of other fake media outlets in America, Europe, Turkey, Azerbaijan, the Middle East and other parts of the globe, we would reach the false conclusion that Armenia/Artsakh has surrendered to Turkey/Azerbaijan and that Turkey and Russia will imminently be brokering a peace that will hand over Armenian lands to Turkey and Azerbaijan.

Please do not believe this hype. As of this writing, Shushi is 100% protected and the Turkish/Azeri/ISIS militant army has been thrown back many times in the past week after numerous attempts to advance on Shushi.

Here is today's update from Armenian Ministry of Defense Spokesman Artsrun Hovhannisyan:

Thanks for staying vigilant as the world becomes exposed to more and more fake news circulating...
