NEW: Statement on election security from DHS:

“The November 3rd election was the most secure in American history. ... There is no evidence that any voting system deleted or lost votes, changed votes, or was in any way compromised.”

Plaintiff's Electors Clause claims fail as a matter of law and fact. The record establishes that Wisconsin's selection of its 2020 Presidential Electors was conducted in the very manner established by the Wisconsin Legislature, "[b]y general ballot at the general election." Wis. Stat. §8.25(1). Plaintiff's complaints about defendants' administration of the election go to the implementation of the Wisconsin Legislature's chosen manner of appointing Presidential Electors, not to the manner itself. Moreover, even if "Manner" were stretched to include plaintiff's implementation objections, plaintiff has not shown a significant departure from the Wisconsin Legislature's chosen election scheme.

This is an extraordinary case. A sitting president who did not prevail in his bid for reelection has asked for federal court help in setting aside the popular vote based on disputed issues of election administration, issues he plainly could have raised before the vote occurred. This Court has allowed plaintiff the chance to make his case and he has lost on the merits. In his reply brief, plaintiff "asks that the Rule of Law be followed." (Pl. Br., ECF No. 109.) It has been.

Voter fraud is rare, and fraud associated with early voting is minuscule.

No president in modern times has claimed voter fraud with such frequency and so little evidence as President Trump. Ballot fraud is exceedingly rare, and there is no evidence that fraud has played any role in determining the election outcome this year.

Claims of voter fraud are common. It's the fraud that's rare.

President Trump is far from the first losing politician to cast doubt on the system, but no modern president has done it more.

Foreign powers attempted to interfere in the 2020 elections by spreading misinformation, according to intelligence officials

Foreign adversaries may have been deterred from interfering in the 2020 U.S. election, officials said, but domestic election interference was heightened by President Trump's efforts to undermine confidence in the system's integrity.
