REIMAGINING ARMENIAN LANGUAGE
EDUCATION IN THE DIASPORA

DR. SHUSHAN KARAPETIAN

Dr. Shushan Karapetian considers the growing challenges facing Armenian language education in the diaspora and highlights ways in which a change in attitudes and a rethinking of an outdated system could help revive our schools and reposition Armenian language and identity as a source of enrichment and discovery.

Dr. Shushan Karapetian is Deputy Director of the USC Institute of Armenian Studies, which promotes research that examines the social, cultural, educational, and political challenges facing Armenia, Artsakh, and the Armenian communities in the Diaspora. Dr. Karapetian researches, teaches, and writes about the Armenian experience, particularly focusing on competing ideologies at the intersection of language and the construction of transnational identity.
